List of selectman hopefuls grows

Sagal and Sullivan make seven

By SHAWN P. SULLIVAN

WILMINGTON - Residents Karl Sagal and Suzanne Sullivan have thrown their hats into the ring and have boosted to seven the number of individuals who hope to fill the vacancy that currently exists on the Board of Selectmen.

Sagal and Sullivan join Gerald Duggan, George Hooper, Brian MacDougall, Frank West and Ann Yurek in their quest to succeed Scott Garrant, who resigned as selectman in July. Garrant stepped down from the board in order to focus on his increasing responsibilities in the personal and professional areas of his life.

Sagal, his wife, Ann Marie, and their son, Ryan, have lived in Wilmington since 1997. Ann Marie Sagal has ties to the community in that her family and relatives have been residents for years. Sagal, an electromechanical engineer, has served in the United States Army and the Army Reserve. Sagal's bid to join the board marks his first foray into public service.

"I realize that I am somewhat a dark horse candidate for this seat on the Board of Selectmen, but I feel that my analytical skills, energy, deep respect for the town and its efforts to improve itself and provide for the residents of this community make me a fine candidate," says Sagal.

Sagal is a firm believer in the town meeting form of local gov-

Local youth arrested after Woburn robbery

By STAFF REPORTS

WILMINGTON - A local teenager was arrested on Wednesday, August 21 after he allegedly held up three Reading men in the parking lot outside of the Target Department Store on Commerce Way in Woburn.

According to authorities, Wilmington resident Daniel J. Tello, 19, told the three men that he was carrying a gun. Tello has been charged with three counts of armed robbery. He was expected to be arraigned in Woburn District Court later on Wednesday.

The victims, all 19 years old, told police that they were waiting for a friend to get out of work at Target when the suspect approached them in a black Ford Mustang.

According to reports, the suspect first asked the victims for a cigarette and then asked them if they wanted to purchase drugs. When the three men declined, the suspect drove a short distance away, turned around and returned.

Tello allegedly told the three men that he had a gun and ordered them to give him all of their money. The victims, who said that the suspect did appear to be holding some sort of a weapon, reportedly handed over $40.

Reports indicate that the suspect then drove away, only to Enjoy the final days of summer yay-cay...

School starts Tuesday

By TARRYN GUARINO

WILMINGTON - Where did the summer go?

Sure, there is still one month left of summer, according to the calendar on the wall. For local students, however, the time is just about upon them to trade sunscreen for school clothes, surfboards for class desks and days at the beach for night spent with homework. Wilmington Public Schools will officially begin classes on Tuesday, August 27.

That first week back in class will be a short one, though. Due to Labor Day Weekend, school will not be in session on Friday, August 30 or Monday, September 2.

Parents of students in all grade levels are encouraged to contact teachers or school administrators throughout the school year to address any questions or concerns they might have. Parents will find this year's roster of school principals extremely helpful. Wilmington High School, which enrolls students in grades 9 through 12, is under the jurisdiction of Edward J. Woods, who can be reached at 694-6060. The Wilmington Middle School, serving all Wilmington students in grades 6 through 8, is headed by Kathleen Conway, at 694-6080. The West Intermediate and North Intermediate Schools, headed by Richard Gorham and Michele Nortonen, respectively, enroll students in grades 4 and 5. The West

Blue jay tests positive for West Nile Virus

By JAKE PETERSON AND SHAWN P. SULLIVAN

TEWKSBURY/WILMINGTON - Last week, the Massachusetts Department of Public Health (MDPH) announced that a dead blue jay had been discovered in Tewksbury earlier this month and had tested positive for the West Nile Virus.

The blue jay makes the first bird in Tewksbury in 2002 to be discovered with the virus. In July, a strain of the virus called Eastern Equine Encephalitis (EEE) was identified in a mosquito that had been collected near Great Swamp on Marion Drive in Tewksbury.

According to Tewksbury Health Director Thomas Carbone, the discovery of the blue jay is not surprising because the virus has been found in birds throughout Massachusetts all year. The virus has also been detected in mosquito pools in other towns in Massachusetts.

Nonetheless, in a press release issued last week, Carbone assures the community that he and his department remain on task when it comes to tracking the virus and preventing its potential to infect any further.

"Tewksbury continues to work closely with the MDPH and other agencies," said Carbone. "Locally, we are actively undertaking larviciding and spraying for mosquitoes by the Massachusetts Mosquito control program."

As many as 79 dead birds have been discovered and tested in Tewksbury. In Wilmington, more than 40 dead birds have been discovered, but none of them have tested positive for the virus.

According to Wilmington Health Director Greg Erickson, there are many reasons why a dead bird might not be tested for the virus once it is found.

"Many times, the condition of the bird is degraded to a point that it cannot be tested," said Erickson.

The West Nile Virus has caused much alarm this summer, for widespread cases in such southern states as Louisiana have in a few instances resulted in fatalities. In Massachusetts, dead birds have been found and tested, and some have proven positive with the virus, but there have not been any fatalities among the human population.

In 2001, more than 1,100 dead birds out of 11,000 that were reported in Massachusetts tested positive for the virus.

According to the MDPH, West Nile Virus primarily affects birds. The virus can be transmitted to humans by mosquitoes that have been infected. Most WNV infections do not cause any symptoms. Mild cases of such an infection, however, can cause a fever, aches in the head and body, skin rashes and swollen lymph glands. Severe cases of infection can lead to headaches, high fevers, neck stiffness, stupor, disorientation, a coma, tremors, convulsions, paralysis and, sometimes, death.

Special meeting Monday

Tackling the Olin question

Selectmen to consider appointing committee, hiring consultant

By SHAWN P. SULLIVAN

WILMINGTON - The formation of a citizens' advisory panel and the hiring of an environmental consultant will be the order of business when the Board of Selectmen holds its special meeting on Monday, August 26.

Both matters, which will be addressed at 7 p.m. in the Town Hall Auditorium, pertain to the ongoing efforts of residents and local officials to monitor the progress of the Olin Chemical Corporation as it continues to clean up the contamination at its property at 51 Eames Street.

On August 12, Representative James Miceli and activists from Wilmington and Woburn attended a selectmen meeting and pressed the board to hire a consultant who could oversee and analyze the work of both Olin and the Department of Environmental Protection. At that meeting, it was revealed in a letter by Olin representative Steven Morrow that Olin would not pay for a consultant but would fund such an advisory panel.

The selectmen are scheduled to hold their next regular meeting on Monday, September 9, but many in the audience pressured Chairman Robert Cain to do something sooner. Selectman Robert Palmer suggested that the board hold a special meeting on August 26. After a quick vote, that date was set.

Between now and Monday, anyone who hopes to be a member of the advisory panel should contact the Office of the Town Manager at 978-658-3311. It is hoped by many that the panel will include an environmental consultant, town officials from Wilmington and Woburn and members of such activist organizations as the Concerned Citizens Network and the Woburn Neighborhood

That's a grand slam gift on Lucci's finger

By JAKE PETERSON

WILMINGTON - What do baseball pros Derek Jeter, Mike Mussina, Paul O'Neil and former Wilmington resident Ken Lucci have in common?

They all possess a World Series ring.

No, Lucci doesn't have the glove skills of Jeter, nor the pitching skills of Mussina, but working a security detail helped him land one of the coveted rings.

Lucci, whose brother Jon operates Lucci's Deli Mart on Lowell Street, grew up in Wilmington and graduated from Austin Preparatory School in Andover. Since leaving Wilmington, Lucci has ventured into the securities business and now offers security consultation for several elite clients. One such client is closely associated with the New York Yankees organization.

While working for that client during the Christmas holiday last year, Lucci was supposed to come home to Wilmington to be with his family; however, the detail demanded that he stay on the scene longer than was planned. In appreciation for that dedication, Lucci was given the ring this spring. His name is inscribed in the ring.

"It was very much unexpected," says Lucci. "However, it is not out of the norm for the way (the Yankees) treat people."

Lucci has met Yankees owner George Steinbrenner several times and has been impressed to see that he is such a "great" family man. Lucci scored a couple of autographed photographs or Steinbrenner and sent one of them to his brother back home. Jon Lucci, by the way, is known to be a die-hard Red Sox fan.

Lucci is the proprietor of Homewatch LLC, which provides bodyguard-type services as well as security systems and consultation.

"A lot of my guys are off-duty police officers," says Lucci.

In 2000, Lucci bought another company, now known as Response Link, from Bell South.

With sales over $6 million between his two companies, Lucci is dedicated to his security business first and foremost. He has just entered his fourth

Here's a glimpse of the World Series Ring that was presented to Wilmington native Ken Lucci by the New York Yankees in appreciation for the security that his business has provided the team. Where's Lucci? Given the nature of Lucci's association with the Yankees, he requested that he not appear in this shot, so that he would not be "at risk" of "being identified" if seen alongside one of the players. SARAH AND FRIENDS. Wilmington youngster Sarah Ward, who has Cystic Fibrosis, sits on a motorcycle and enjoys the company of family, friends and staffers at the Outback Steakhouse in Lowell. The restaurant is sponsoring a fundraiser that will raise money to be put towards a development of a cure for the disease. (courtesy photo)

Take a "Cruise for a Cure" for Cystic Fibrosis

WILMINGTON - It's time once again to take that motorcycle for a cruise.

This year, the 5th Annual "Cruise for a Cure" motorcycle ride will take place on Sunday, September 8. Funds raised at the event contribute to the efforts of the Cystic Fibrosis (CF) Foundation to find a cure for the devastating disease.

In December of 1992, five-month-old Wilmington resident Sarah Ward was diagnosed with CF. Her family quickly learned all that they could about the disease. Ultimately, CF is a disease that affects the exocrine glands. A child with cystic fibrosis produces sticky mucus in his or her lungs and throughout the body. Because of this mucus, the child with CF is susceptible to difficulties with digestion, sinus infections, and most importantly, lung infections.

Sarah has had several surgeries to remove polyps from her sinus cavity. Every day she must have chest physical therapy and use a nebulizer to help thin the secretions of mucus. Sarah recently spent 10 days of her summer vacation in Children's Hospital of Boston for a course of IV antibiotics to help clear up stubborn bacteria in her body which was making it difficult for her to breathe well. Throughout all of this, Sarah remains a bright and energetic 10-year-old girl who will be in fifth grade at the West Intermediate School in Wilmington in the fall. She participates in cheering, soccer, and skiing, and she takes figure skating lessons year round.

In the past four years, the Cruise for a Cure has raised nearly $20,000 for the Cystic Fibrosis Foundation. Christopher and Kristine Newcomb, Sarah's aunt and uncle and two of the organizers of the event, are thrilled to announce that this year's ride is being sponsored by the Outback Steakhouse in Lowell. Registration begins at 9 a.m. at the Outback Steakhouse. Motorcyclists will depart at 10 a.m. and ride for about one hour on the scenic roads of northern Massachusetts and southern New Hampshire. They will gather at the Dunkin' Donuts on Route 101 in Milford, New Hampshire, which will serve as the host for the ride's only rest stop. From there, riders will continue on for about an hour more back to the Outback Steakhouse in Lowell, which will provide a delicious barbecue lunch for all participants.

There will be live music, raffle prizes and the drawing of a grand prize, which includes a five-day, unlimited mileage cruise in Orlando, Florida on a Harley Davidson, courtesy of American V-Twin Harley Rentals, plus round trip air transportation for two to Orlando, courtesy of American Airlines. Riders can qualify for the grand prize by raising at least $75 in pledge money. If they raise $100, they will receive two chances at the grand prize. Then for every $100 more they raise they will receive additional chances. Also, the rider who raises the most money (at least $1,000) will receive round trip air transportation for two to the Caribbean, courtesy of American Airlines.

Anyone who wishes to donate to the cause can send a check payable to The Cystic Fibrosis Foundation and send it to 114 Perimeter Road, Unit G & H in Nashua, New Hampshire, 03063.

Local transportation improvements remain a priority

WILMINGTON/TEWKSBURY - Representative James R. Miceli (D-Wilmington/Tewksbury) worked this session to ensure that local money for transportation improvements in Tewksbury and Wilmington remain intact. The legislature recently approved a transportation bond bill, which includes $100 million in Chapter 90 funding for fiscal years 2003 and 2004. When authorized by the Governor the Town of Tewksbury will receive $438,141.56, and the Town of Wilmington will receive $403,707.71.

Chapter 90 is a fund that was established in 1973 to reimburse cities and towns for money spent to improve local infrastructure. This money can be used on local roadways, sidewalks, bridges, road building equipment, and related engineering services and expenses. Local officials contacted Rep.

Miceli regarding their concerns that this funding might be cut due to declining state revenues. Recognizing that municipalities rely on Chapter 90 money for maintenance of local roadways, Rep. Miceli went to work. He met with Speaker Finneran and the Chairman of the House Committee on transportation and received a commitment from them that the money would be included in the Transportation Bond.

"This year most of the focus has been on the economic difficulties on both the state and federal level," Rep. Miceli said. "I am proud to say that despite those problems I have been able to bring some money and projects back to my communities."

It's Your Money
by Joyce Brisbois

SOCIAL SECURITY: NOW OR LATER?

Time was, it didn't pay to work and take Social Security benefits. Your package was cut severely to offset earnings, especially before age 65. But there's no earnings test today; you can work and still collect. Should you?

One key issue is what you get. Benefits are cut 20 percent if you start benefits at 62, but you get three years worth of benefits before the usual retirement age of 65 (due to rise toward 67 in the coming years.) Each year you wait after 65, you get a bonus of 6.5 percent. Waiting until age 70 to collect means a 32.5 percent boost in benefits. Is it worthwhile?

Maybe not. Take benefits at 62, and you're ahead until you reach age 77. Start at age 65 instead of 70, and you'll be ahead until age 80. But if you wait until 70, even with bonuses, you won't make up the shortfall until you're 85. Best bet: take the money early and invest it, even at 6 percent, as long as you can.

As September 11 approaches

With the first anniversary of September 11 just three weeks away, The Town Crier is hoping that readers will share their thoughts as they reflect on the tragedy of that day and the year that has passed since. Where were you when you first heard the news of the terrorist attacks? How have the events of that moment in history affected your life in the months that have followed? What changes have you observed in the community and the world around you? How do you feel about the manner with which the United States has pursued its war on terror? In what direction would you like to see our country head?

In the weeks ahead, we encourage you to write to us and share your personal stories and views of September 11. Please keep your letter under 250 words, and feel free to email it to towncrier1@aol.com, fax it to 978-658-2266 or mail it to or stop by 104 Lowell Street in Wilmington and hand it to a member of our staff. Thank you.

Letters to the Editor

Why hasn't the town done more about contamination?

Dear Editor:

My husband and I have lived in Wilmington our whole lives. When we decided to buy our home we looked in all areas even New Hampshire. We both decided we would like to stay in Wilmington because it feels like home and it's where we want to raise our family. We bought our home two years ago and are now raising two small children.

We recently found out about the toxic waste contamination from Olin Chemical and have researched its hazardous effects on our water supply. After receiving information from a friend we found that a report on June 9, 1981 (over 20 years ago) listed toxic chemicals on this site including nitrosodiphenylamine, nitro benzene, toluene, and di-n-butylphthalate. There very well may be other volatile organic chemicals as well as synthetic chemicals, as or even more dangerous than those listed above that we, as a community are unaware of. It is also a well known factor that benzene (which is part of nitrobenzene) and toluene are huge leukemia causing agents. Wilmington is now involved in a study of childhood leukemia because of the elevated number of cases in our community.

This contaminated site has been sitting there for over twenty (20) years and now Olin wants to sell it off. Imagine how deep and widespread these toxins have traveled? It is known now that it has spread and poses a daily threat to 40 percent of town residents via our water supply. The same water supply we use to drink, cook and bath with and nothing has been done about it.

What I and other concerned citizens would like to know is:

- How could our town let these dirty companies come in, operate, contaminate our land, let it sit for 20 years and then try to sell it, leaving behind contaminated ground, water, air and a town full of many sick children and adults?

Why is it that the town has not forced them to clean it up?

We are now involved in Wilmington's own "A Civil Action." We hire town officials to protect us from issues like these. Where are they?

Why haven't they protected us? We the people of Wilmington need to stand together to fight to have this contamination cleaned up because the town officials haven't. I urge every Wilmington resident to go to the Town Meeting on August 26 at 7 p.m. for the correct location please call 978-658-7754.

This effects us all!!

Continue fight for new library

Dear Editor:

I have never written a letter to the editor before, however I felt this was the perfect opportunity to voice my opinion.

Let me start by saying that I attended both Town Meetings, and the Town Moderator should be commended for displaying dignity and poise throughout two heated meetings.

I attended these meetings in the hope of obtaining a new library for my three children who use it regularly. I was able to vote at the April meeting but had to leave before the vote in the August meeting. To say I am discouraged is an understatement. We are no closer to obtaining a new library than we were before.

I only hope the petitioners and people who voted Yes on Article I continue their fight to obtain a new library, or will the victory simply be a victory with no outcome other than stopping the new library. I am glad that over 1,000 people showed up for this meeting, hopefully these people and more will continue to put pressure on our elected officials to pursue a new library no matter where the location.

Thanks to those who made live broadcast possible

Dear Editor:

I was sitting in my office here at WCTV still unwinding from the arduous task of covering the Special Town Meeting which aired live and will be replaying on Channel 22 throughout the month. I realized that without the great crew I had assembled to assist me with this daunting task, I would have been a ship without a rudder. Live television is quite a production to accomplish. Everyone in the television crew is really performing without a net. You could have to deal with so many challenges and issues from a bad wire to a total loss of signal from equipment failure. Luckily for us, we had no such bad luck and the Special Town Meeting aired without a single incident.

And, I had a great crew to work with. I would just like to thank my faithful and fearless crew who endured the sauna-esque Special Town Meeting. Ron Buccheri, Jim Buckley, Walter Collings, Donna Gacek, Brian Gillespie, Ruth Kennedy, Don Leard, and Tom Pazyra; you all have my greatest thanks and appreciation for the great job you all did with coverage of the Special Town Meeting. Thank you. It has been said "a hand is more than just a palm and five fingers," and I believe the WCTV crew proved that point as true.

I would also like to thank the town workers who did a great job setting up (you all thought it was hot that night in the Barrows Auditorium, try setting up there during the day.) If you should run into any of the people mentioned above, give them a handshake, a pat on the back, or just a simple "Thank you," because they all deserve it.

Sincerely,
Robert M. Carbone 2nd

Sale of Olin must be prohibited

Dear Editor:

The Wilmington-Woburn Collaborative would like to thank the many residents of Wilmington and Woburn who gave of their personal time to appear before the Wilmington Board of Selectmen at the meeting of August 12, 2002. We appreciate your vows of support and your show of interest in prohibiting the sale of Olin Chemical Company to anyone until every last chemical and contaminated material is removed from the property.

Olin Chemical is a Tier 1 A site: It has the worst contamination site rating that the Massachusetts Department of Environmental Protection puts out. It is this collaborative's goal to stop the sale and redevelopment of this property.

Their most recent assertion is that they are pursuing a development of a Warehouse/Distribution center, after removing from consideration a proposal of a Construction and Demolition facility. This new assertion is on the heels of the Town of Wilmington and the City of Woburn's call for an independent environmental consultant to evaluate fully the contamination of their 51 Eames Street property.

This company continues to move forward with their "intended goal" of selling their property and "getting out of Dodge" which is irrespective of new allegations of impropriety and possible illegal activity allowed on their property in 1988. First reported last week to the Town of Wilmington officials, by Selectman Lepore, a purported removal of contaminated material and soil from the 51 Eames Street property was transported to landfills and possibly to other areas of the town.

The Concerned Citizens' Network (CCN) and the Woburn Neighborhood Association (WNA) have reaffirmed their commitment to stop any and all development by Olin Chemical Company or by any potential buyers until the contamination is completely removed.

We demand that an independent environmental scientist comprehensively investigates the property.

We demand a full investigation of the alleged illegal transportation of this highly contaminated soil to other areas of the town and to other landfills.

Now more than ever, we need to stand up and prohibit the sale of Olin Chemical Company. WNA and CCN plead for your involvement and attendance at the next Board of Selectmen's meeting on August 26, 2002 at 7 p.m. This meeting's agenda is to discuss the Olin property and the formation of a committee to hire an independent environmental scientist. Our consultant will not be in our immediate future, however the sale of this property is most likely, imminent. We need immediate action. Come and join us in saying "No Sale!" For location of the next Board of Selectmen meeting call 978-658-7754.

More facts needed before new library site chosen

*Dear Editor:

I feel it's time to remove some of the politics from the issue of the library. Most of the concerned citizens of the town agree that the current library is not meeting the needs of the town. Most also agree that improvements need to be made to meet the current needs that are not being met, and to provide for the future needs. This will not be done by each interested party calling names and forwarding only insults or innuendo about the opposition.

Who is the opposition? Most don't like to admit it, but the town doesn't easily fit into any two categories. Is it the "Whitefields" against the "Swains"? Maybe it's the "New Library" against the "No New Libraries," or even the "Let's spend money" against the "Let's not spend money" people.

I have attended several meetings and public forums that have clearly identified nearly half of the town that wants to spend money and build a new library at the Wildwood School. This group has made itself known. The other half of the town has not rallied behind any single cause, (save that of not letting the other half have their way) and it is time to come together.

I feel that for the town to get together behind one cause and move forward, it will require those that feel that they have the best plan to come forward and address the other interests' concerns. Let's look at those concerns.

There has been much talk of the Library Feasibility study. As a taxpayer,

I paid $40,000 for that document. I also read it. Can all of us say that we have? The town published a condensed version that is available to any who ask. Some are saying it is fatally flawed. Others are saying that the flaws are inconsequential. Why has neither side offered either corrections to the flaws, or itemized explanations for their irrelevance? I think it is time to stop talking around this document, but rather time to start with it, examine the specific reasons published within this document or its conclusions, and then have the town draw its own conclusions, based on all the facts available, and finally get on our way to correcting our town's library problems.

After reading the Library Feasibility Study, I found that I had some questions that were still unanswered. Why can't we just ask for an addendum that addresses those that were not covered by the report? I am sure that I am not the only person who has questions that need answers. I believe that the raw data that was collected by Tappe Associates may well answer many of the community's questions. If given the opportunity, the answers to a well rounded list of questions could put all discontent about the study to rest and get the whole town on the same path to a new and complete library.

It has been brought up at more than one public forum that there are mistakes in the report. There are minor errors regarding curb cuts and what road site 3 is located on, but I believe that most of the actual factual errors are indeed minor and not substantial enough to invalidate the report. More substantial to the validity of the report is the information that is missing. Filling in some of the blanks that were in the report will go much further toward having it gain more widespread support than sniping at those who don't agree with it.

I offer some representative questions that occurred to me as I read the Feasibility Report. The sites are not compared item for item, and therefore hard to compare. The reorganization of the information in the report may make it more palatable to more readers.

On site one, the lot size is listed as a constraint, but the cost of purchasing the neighboring lot is not included which may be a reasonable method of equalizing the available space. Given the size of the budget being suggested as available for this new library, a small land purchase could be a small consideration. In any case, it must be considered in any comprehensive comparative study.

One site two, "possible wetlands" on either side of the lot are indicated. What would the report cost if they actually researched the points that they bring up? Tappe should replace the words, "possible wetlands," with there are or there are not wetlands in a particular location.

On site three, the first constraint listed is that the Swain School is in an Historic District. Since the report goes on at length about how this Swain site is being saved for the town hall, how is this relevant as unique to this site? This same issue will have to be addressed at this site for either the library construction or the town hall construction, so the point is moot.

Also, at site three, seasonal flooding is listed as a constraint and an indication of high ground water. The report goes on to indicate that the health department indicates the ground water to be five to six feet below the surface, identical to the findings for ground water at site four, but water issues are not indicated at site four. The report presents the indication, while admitting that no tests were done, and that anecdotal reports were used in assessing water as a problem. We are left with a report that claims a water issue on a site that has no wetlands on it and no water problem at site four where there are wetlands on the same lot. This is a topic that also would equally effect the future construction of the town hall as well.

Again at site three, relocating the high school parking is listed as a constraint. Will this also be considered a constraint when the town hall is built there?

In conclusion, I have a desire to be able to have the sufficient information necessary to decide fairly on a location for the new library. I have emotional reasons to like site one, three and four. I'd like to have comparative facts available to me to solidify my position.

Attend the special selectmen meeting on Aug. 26

Dear Editor:

Have you noticed that when you drive into Woburn from Wilmington on Main Street we have a new "entering Woburn" sign? About a month ago, one of the 18-wheel trucks on its way to the Wilmington landfill came too close and destroyed the original sign. When we called and complained a new sign was installed. The new sign is less than two by two feet. If the sign were any smaller the name Wilmington would have to be abbreviated. What is the hidden message here?

Another sign of the times is the joining together of people from different cities and towns to work together as a community to solve mutual problems. A case in point is the WNA/CCN Collaboration. Working together as a group we were able to bring to the attention of both Woburn and Wilmington residents the environmental injustice that is being perpetuated on the Olin Chemical site. All the initial investigations of this property confirm that the property is highly contaminated. The initial investigation also said that the contamination could be heading toward the Aberjona River, so this would make the Olin Chemical Co. of Wilmington a multi city problem.

We the Woburn Neighborhood Association have known since February of 2002 that the owners of the property are in the final phase of testing before actual cleanup. What do they decided to do? Sell the property to a developer who has as one of his proposals to build a toxic waste generating plant under the disguise of a C&D factory?

Community was there for Syring's during their sorrow

Dear Editor:

On May 25, 2002, we unexpectedly lost our daughter, Jessica Syring. Jessica was a fun loving thirteen year old who was a joy to have around. Unfortunately, along with the grief of losing Jess, we were confronted with $9,000 in funeral costs. Ms. Kate Conway, the Principal of the Wilmington Middle School, kindly started the "Jessica Syring Memorial Fund." Thanks to Ms. Conway, and the many individuals who contributed, the fund collected enough money to cover the entire payment for the funeral. During this time of sorrow, this is one thing we did not have to worry about. We were able to concentrate on our family, including Jessica's sister and brother.

Over the past few months, we have seen kindness from many people. When we received the Town Crier on June 12, 2002, to see a front-page picture of Donna Doherty and Joyce Levine selling raffles for the fund to Dave at Colmer Monuments and all his help with the stone.

We would sincerely like to thank all our friends and family for being there for us. We are also grateful for the many people, some of whom we don't even know, who helped to raise funds, and who sent cards and flowers. Everyone's thoughts and prayers touched us.

Sincerely,
Bryan and Debbie Syring

Working together with our neighbors in Wilmington we were able to assemble many residents from Woburn and Wilmington at the August 12 Wilmington Board of Selectmen meeting. With help from Woburn Alderman-at-Large Joanna Gonsalves and Alderman Hank Galante, the Wilmington Selectmen agreed to establish a joint Woburn/Wilmington Citizen Committee. The purpose of this committee is to hire an environmental consultant to investigate the Olin property and Olin's records. There will be a meeting held to confirm this committee on Monday, August 26 at 7 p.m. in the Town Hall Auditorium.

Please make plans to attend and show your support for this important issue. If you have any questions, call the Woburn Neighborhood Association at 781-935-2438.

Sincerely

Local postal service joins consumer fraud campaign

WILMINGTON - Postmaster James R. "Jake" Quinn said recently the U.S. Postal Service is planning to take part in the "National Senior Fraud Awareness Week Campaign" the week of August 26.

He said the Postal Service is partnering in the campaign with the Postal Inspection Service, Federal Trade Commission and the Senior Action Coalition to reach audiences of senior citizens, their families and their caregivers.

The program is designed to educate senior citizens and their families on telemarketing, sweepstakes and mail fraud schemes, "rackets" that are bilking seniors out of their money and leaving many broke and distraught," he said.

The postal official said the best way to protect seniors against scams "is to learn to recognize the warning signs and learn some of the 'common phrases' used by these companies."

In an attempt to educate the public about fraudulent schemes, he outlined the following top five mail fraud scams.

Advance fee loans: A con artist offers a "guaranteed" loan for a fee paid in advance; however, he or she has no ability to secure a loan for you. Instead, the swindler steals your fee and either disappears or bilks other unsuspecting victims while stalling you with excuses as to why your loan has not been refunded.

Prizes or sweepstakes: "Congratulations! You're the lucky winner of one of four prizes." You simply have to pay a "processing fee" to find out what you've won. And it's never anything of value.

Charity fraud: Either your money never gets to the charity, or the charity doesn't exist at all. The only one who benefits from your generosity is the swindler.

Failure to render merchandise or services: You may have ordered something by mail or over the internet in good faith, but the party you made the deal with has taken the money and run.

Employment schemes: $$$ Thousands of High Paying Government Jobs!!! Rather than preparing you for existing vacancies, as they claim, the con artists charge you for materials you could have gotten for free from the hiring government agency - which may or may not have job openings.

The postmaster said there are a number of other mail fraud schemes including: Identity theft, travel schemes, foreign lotteries, chain letters, insurance fraud, medical fraud, work at home schemes, false billing and investment fraud.

Financially distressed persons should be leery of the "predatory lending" scheme, he said.

"In this scheme," he said, "consumers are told they will be provided with easy access to money. Instead, predatory lenders use high pressure salespersons, inflated interest rates, outrageous fees, unaffordable repayment terms and harassing collection tactics to take consumers' money or other property used as collateral when the loans are called in by the unscrupulous lenders."

Golfers can tee up for Byers scholarship

By TARRYN GUARINO
TEWKSBURY - On September 30, local golfers will have a chance to strut their stuff and support a great cause.

The Byers family of Tewksbury is sponsoring the first annual Willie Byers Memorial Golf Tournament, to be held at the Andover Country Club. The proceeds of the event will benefit a scholarship in Byers' name at Tewksbury Memorial High School (TMHS).

The funds raised will also benefit the Massachusetts chapter of the ALS Association. Amyotrophic Lateral Sclerosis (ALS), more commonly known as Lou Gehrig's disease, is a paralyzing neuromuscular disease to which Willy Byers succumbed in April of 2000. There is no known cure for ALS.

The golf tournament is a fitting tribute to Byers, who was a great fan of both golf and hockey. He was a member of the hockey team at Tewksbury Memorial High School, which he graduated from in 1982.

"When Willy was sick, a friend of ours organized a tournament at the Andover Country Club to help with medical costs," wife Camille Byers says. "We thought that another tournament we be a good way to raise funds for the Willie Byers scholarship."

The scholarship was awarded to a TMHS student last year in Byers' name, with funds provided by the family. This year, the Byers family hopes to raise enough money to award the scholarship and support the Massachusetts ALS organization, which provides support to local patients and their families.

The golf tournament plans to be an exciting day, with some great events planned for a worthy cause. In addition to the golf, which will no doubt be high-spirited, given the prize of a car for a hole-in-one, there will also be a dinner held at the country club after the tournament. Entertainment and some fantastic raffles are slated for the evening festivities, with prizes including round trip airfares to Paris and a stay at the Boston Seaport Hotel. The dinner is open to all, not just golfers, and tickets to the event are $50 for an adult and $25 for children.

For those who wish to try their luck on the green, there is still space available to register in the tournament.

"We hope to make this a yearly event," Camille Byers says. "We've received a lot of support."

For more information on registering for the Willie Byers Memorial Golf Tournament, contact Camille Byers at 978-886-8608.

TMHS will hold 9th grade orientation

TEWKSBURY - There will be a ninth grade orientation program at Tewksbury Memorial High School on the evening of August 26, 2002 from 6 to 7:30 p.m. in the gymnasium. All ninth grade students and their parents/guardians are invited to attend this important orientation program. The same invitation is extended to new transfer students at Tewksbury

Memorial High School.

The purpose of this program is to assist all new high school students. The outline of activities includes a short presentation of "Things to Know," and an abbreviated schedule, introduction of faculty, and a student council sponsored reception in the cafeteria.

For more information, contact the high school office at 640-7822.

Kilgore honored

WILMINGTON - Mark Kilgore of Wilmington was selected as a 2002 Armed Forces Communications and Electronics Association Fellowship Awards Program winner for "academic achievement and a demonstrated aptitude for a career in the communications-electronics field."

Winners were selected from nominations solicited from approximately 70 local high schools by the Lexington-Concord chapter of AFCEA. One of nine recipients, Kilgore was presented a framed certificate and a check for $1,000 at the Officers Club located on Hanscom AFB in May. Along with the scholarship, Kilgore also received the opportunity to work as an intern with Mitre this summer.

The son of Patricia Kilgore, Mark will be attending Stanford University this fall.

AFCEA is an association whose members are working in the areas of security and military preparedness though the development and manufacture of equipment in the fields of signals, communication, electronics, and photography. The Lexington-Concord chapter is closely affiliated with Hanscom.

News You Can Use - You Can't Lose

What harm in getting knowledge, even from a sot, a pot, a fool, a mitten or a slipper (Rabelais)? Or a newsletter, if you ask me. Somewhere in between books and newspapers are those informative little "briefings" with the inside story. Concise, to the point, newsletters are always welcome, fun to read, easily tucked into pocket or purse, to take along on the train or plane, or to ease the pain of the waiting room drain.

In the words of Ralph Waldo Emerson, there is no knowledge that is not power. Over the years I have subscribed to countless newsletters. I love newsletters. It was this interest and love that gave rise to my own newsletter several years back. Some of you may remember The Interrupters News & Review, a quarterly newsletter published right here in the Big-W by me and my sister Diana.

Condensed, compact, succinct, will make you think, with a lot less ink, in-a-nut-shell sell, these are my two current favorites. Both are very different, vaguely related, both worth checking out.

Andrew Weil has been the hottest health guru in the public eye for some time now. His books Spontaneous Healing, Eight Weeks to Optimum Health and Natural Health, Natural Medicine have all been best sellers. His newsletter Self-healing is filled with solid, sensible advice on health and healing with an Integrative Medicine approach. Simply put, Weil combines the best of alternative and conventional medicine with emphasis on the body's built-in ability to heal, viewing the patient as a whole person, mind, spirit, as well as body. Weil leans heavily on natural remedies rather than drugs. But, for me, what makes Andrew Weil stand out is his reasonable, broad outlook. Most of us could follow his suggestions without turning our lives upside down. The question and answer section is great. Questions are personal and relevant, often hitting on a subject that I have been wondering about. Weil is always on the button.

A Harvard Medical School M.D., Andrew Weil has an open mind, his knowledge is deep. Don't get buried in the avalanche of advice. Self Healing can sort, sift, simplify; it won't bore, you won't snore through this one.

The first time I picked up a copy of Cook & Tell, the "look" alone was enough. I knew I'd like it. Small, squarish (about 8" x 7"), with old fashioned typewritten print, on white paper, and with what appeared to be free hand drawings.

A home-grown kitchen newsletter, Cook & Tell, now in its 22nd year, is written and illustrated by Karyl Bannister from beautiful Love's Cove, Southport, Maine. Bannister's philosophy, in her own words, is that food should be reasonably wholesome and taste good. Recipes come from "everywhere" - many are sent in by readers, some are tripped over, or somehow passed along. All recipes are tried first by Bannister, in her own big old farmhouse, in her own small kitchen.

And I mean small. Yes, I've been there. About three summers ago my curiosity got the best of me. (Good excuse to visit Fred Neilson, too, in Booth Bay, which is right around the corner). We called ahead, my sister joined me, we drove all the way on the old Rt. 1-1A, arriving after lunch. We were greeted like old friends. Karyl Bannister's charisma is strongly reflected in the pages of her newsletter. If there is any such thing as down-home sophistication, that's Karyl. Direct, confident, funny (lots of good stories), likeable.

Cook & Tell readers are encouraged to add their two cents, to criticize, contradict, contribute. Excerpts from letters are printed, teeny-weeny ads and messages mass the margins. Above, alongside and below, recipes are blocked with borders of doodles, quotes, and notes. You can write, recommend, and reply or rely, on food that is fun, tasty, and easy to cook, with lots of shortcuts and basic ingredients.

The first page of each issue of Cook & Tell is a personal essay by Karyl Bannister. After reading a few of these, you'll want to visit too. And you can. I noticed in the August C&T, on the back page, there is an invitation to visit. It's called "The Return of Iced Tea and Cookies." It reads as follows: If you're anywhere near Booth Bay stop by and say Hi over a glass of iced tea and cookies. You get 30 minutes right in the middle of whatever's going on here, and then you're on your way.

Sounds good to me.

The Power of the Word

The power of words affects us all. For good or bad, words develop attitudes and produce emotions of love or hate. We are never sure of the truth. However, we in the USA can choose words of love and peace or hatred and destruction.

The people in many countries don't have this choice. They have only their indoctrination of one absolute teaching. Some of the radical Islamic countries give no other choice than revenge and terror. If you have any doubt of this force, remember the young Palestinian children whose only goal in life is to kill a Jew. The constant repetition of destructive words becomes part of their very souls. Friends and relatives support each other and reinforce this idea. Words become the beliefs that become a sacred bond.

Word brainwashing has been used by every culture to promote control of people's minds. Leaders and those who seek power to control make this a science. Religion, politics, and government all gain and retain power through the power of the word. If a speaker is convincing enough right can seem wrong making justice a fallacy. A good righteous person may never derive power because he chooses the truth over the words of manipulation.

Money is at the forefront for those who wish to achieve power. Spreading the word takes money. Those who have the most money reach and influence the most people. The same message over and over presented by tv, advertisements, books, and billboards will in time convince most people. How often have we heard "I know that is true, I read it in a book." Unless a person is well read and able to evaluate what he reads, he is more susceptible to deception and misunderstanding. If we are fortunate we are brought up in a solid meaningful environment filled with knowledge.

Children are the most vulnerable. They lack the experience and knowledge of living to truly understand truth and morality. No matter where they turn, they are blasted with sex, sex, and sex. Scrupulous money-makers take advantage of children's raging hormones and lack of direction to sell their products. Advertisers gain by exposing them to the overpowering effects of sexuality.

Today's child's world is saturated with immorality made to look and feel like an everyday occurrence. Even the possible horror of genital herpes is portrayed on tv as a casual event. Medication side effects and the uncertain results are mentioned while soothing music is being played. Soon the fear of sexual disease will no longer be a deterrent. What other road can they follow? Constant exposure to negative words and scenes has led many children to this dangerous path. We are all led by our teachings to believe in a way of life. Some for better, others for worse, depending on the outcome of life's success or failure.

Being raised as a Christian leaves you with the teachings of Jesus Christ. "Love thy neighbor. Forgive your enemies. When slapped on one cheek, turn the other cheek." This exposure to the words of Christ affects our thoughts and being. Although it becomes part of some of us, some may never utilize these teachings. They sometimes need the power of suffering and fear to bring it to the surface. Some third world countries live with this pain on a daily basis.

"O God help me." It is used by all ethnic groups but in different languages. They all have the tremendous need to express their anguish in words. These words also allow the person stating "O God" to reach a place of greater security and comfort. The power of the word has healed and brought much peace to the world. The power of the word can indeed be greater than the power of the sword. A verbal phrase, a prayer, a speech, or a sermon can move a person's soul.

My greatest concern is the misuse of the words that are corrupting our children. Words that deceive, over - stimulate, and confuse are being used against our children. It all begins with lies that are presented as truths. "Children have the right to live their own lives. What do parents know about the feelings of a child? Children have the right to dress the way they feel." Parents realize these so-called rights could harm their children, unless they are responsible and self-sufficient. If fabrications are presented day in and day out as truths, they will be perceived as truths. The money-makers who sell to children use brainwashing to convince and many times to exploit. Unending repetition will reach most children.

This money incentive can only be surpassed by a parent's concern to give the children the health and happiness they deserve. This takes time and much effort in constantly repeating the truth so that it will remain the truth. We have no other choice.

When a balloon flew over Silver Lake

The following article first appeared in the edition of the Town Crier that was published on September 6, 1962.
By CAPT. LARZ NEILSON

WILMINGTON - Silver Lake, Monday, was just as quiet as if it were an ordinary weekday in, say, late September. Only three kiddoes were at the beach during the morning for a swim, and the lifeguard occupied some of his time taking in the summer gear, no longer to be used this season, as Labor Day was the last day of the season at Silver Lake.

It used to be that Silver Lake was a very busy place on Labor Day, but the automobile has changed all that. People now go to the White Mountains, or anywhere else, for the holiday - anything but stay at home.

For the past decade or so, there have been attempts to rejuvenate the good old times, but these attempts too have fallen by the wayside. The lifeguards had instituted swimming events and races for Labor Day, with prizes for the winners derived directly from the profits of the beach canteen.

Last year, there was no canteen, and the merchants put up some prizes, but not too many kids appeared. Their parents had taken them elsewhere. So in the year 1962, there was nothing but an expanse of water and a lonely lifeguard.

Forty years ago, when there weren't millions of cars to clog the highways, it was a different story at Silver Lake. Labor Day, then, was a big three-day event with a Horribles Parade, games of chance and a dare-devil balloonist.

The Silver Lake Men's Club was a live-wire organization, with a Silver Lake Hall on Grove Avenue (later an apartment house) where early day movies were occasionally shown for the enjoyment of the kiddoes, and all sorts of things happened, most of them wonderful, for the children of that age. On the Saturday before Labor Day, there was a Horribles Parade, with hundreds of contestants. The parade would march practically around the lake ending at the Men's Club, where the judges used to stand. Then everyone would go over to the ballfield (which no longer exists) on Cottage Street, where there would be a carnival, the largest in Middlesex County or possibly all of Massachusetts.

There was always a steam-driven merry-go-round, which Elmer Southmayd used to operate. Elmer was nicknamed "Squeaky" because of his high-pitched voice. Elmer was a mechanical genius, possibly born a century too soon. He took delight in mechanical contrivances, and could fix anything. But in those days, a mechanical genius was not a highly paid man, and Elmer had all he could do to rustle up food for his numerous brood.

But Elmer would importantly fire up the boiler and then push the levers that made the merry-go-round go 'round, and he enjoyed the proceedings even more than did the kids who rode round and round for a nickel. There were games of chance galore, and there were many other innocent games amusement. The event went on for three days, with time off for church services, and there was always a big wind-up on Labor Day night. The balloonist, who first came in at the end of the big fairs of the Silver Lake Men's Club, was probably the biggest event to occur in the lives of the Lakers of that day. As we recall it, he appeared at three Labor Day fairs in succession, and then was killed in a fall, somewhere near Taunton.

The balloon was of the hot-air variety. A pair of ginpoles were set up, always near the merry-go-round, where Elmer could keep an eye on them, and the empty balloon would be suspended from ropes that hung from the two poles. The mouth of the balloon would be over a sort of chimney, which was at the end of an underground tunnel, at the other end of which was the place for a fire.

At the appointed time on Labor Day afternoon, the balloonist would appear in person, suitably decked out for flying, as it was imagined to be necessary in those days. He would be wearing jodpuhrs, and leather puttees, with an old-fashioned leather aviator's helmet and goggles. Under the balloon's skirts he would disappear, putting his parachute into the interior of the balloon, probably in a receptacle designed for that purpose, and then he would emerge, wearing his harness, to face the hundreds of hungry eyes of the children, women and men who had come to watch his death-defying stunt.

A fire would be started in the pit by someone, maybe Mike Barry, and for an hour or so (perhaps it was only 20 minutes, but it seemed like an hour) Mile, Elmer and others would take turns throwing cups of kerosene into the fire.

As the heat increased, it would go into the interior of the balloon, which soon began to expand, held in place by the guy-lines from the ginpoles and 50 or 100 volunteer "anchor-men" who clutched the edges of the balloon, to keep it on the ground. The flames would leap higher and higher, and soon one could see them, in silhouette, in the interior of the balloon. Meanwhile, of course, the dare-devil balloonist would be telling the ladies how he would pull the rip-cord when he felt the balloon beginning to descend, and how there wasn't any real danger, etc. etc. and how he wouldn't snag any of the homes as he floated over them, because his balloon would be over 1,000 feet in the air.

Finally, the balloon was full. And then came the Big Moment!

The volunteer anchor-men would be straining to keep it from soaring away. The intrepid aviator would take a glance around him, then grasp which held his parachute harness, and order, "Let go!" Dozens of Model T Fords would be standing by for that moment, motors running and drivers in their seats.

As the balloon soared off into the Wild Blue Yonder, it would be carried by the wind, and the motorists would attempt to chase it. There were not as many streets in Wilmington in those days, and chasing a balloon in Model T was quite an adventure in itself. If, for instance, the balloon should head over towards the West School on Shawshen Avenue, there were only two ways to go to get there - either by Bridge Lane or by Lake Street. The Fords would split into two groups, one going each way. Then, meeting at the school, they would probably learn that the balloon had altered its drift in a higher strata of wind, and had gone over Silver Lake towards North Wilmington.

It must be recorded that no accident ever befell the Daredevil Balloonist while he was in Wilmington. He would soar around for a while and then descend, and he never even dropped into the lake, to the intense disappointment of many of the younger boys, and perhaps some of the older and very old.

It was an awe-inspiring event, and there are probably dozens of picture albums in Wilmington today that show pictures of the Dare Devil hanging suspended from his balloon as he soared off into space. But today everyone motors off to the White Mountains or elsewhere on Labor Day, and Silver Lake is just a quiet village on what used to be its Day of Days.

Association. Usually, the Board of Selectmen runs a quiet schedule in the summertime and meets just once a month. This summer, however, has been different. Monday's upcoming year as a security consultant for a client that is closely connected to the Yankees organization.

A resident of Bellaire, Florida, Lucci has a house on the beach and loves the southern sunshine. A lot of the security work Lucci performs in relationship to the Yankees takes place in Tampa, Florida, where many of the Yankee offices are located.

Lucci's World Series ring may have been earned through an unusual way, and, to boot, it is one of the last of its kind. His ring is unique because it has the Twin Towers of the World Trade Center embossed on it. The towers are no longer engraved on the rings now produced.

William McDougal, a childhood friend of Lucci's, was a batboy for the Red Sox for several years. McDougal sports a 1986 Red Sox Championship Ring, another point of contention between the friends who support rival teams.

Lucci says that he does not wear his ring around town too often. When others have spotted the ring on his finger, they frequently assume that he is a talent scout for the New York Yankees.

Lucci, a successful business man, entrepreneur and World Series ring owner, does have what might be considered by some to be, well, a flaw.

"I am a big Red Sox fan, and always will be," states Lucci. "But when it comes right down to it, I have to root for the Yankees."

According to Lucci, his juxtaposition with the Yankees has given him insight to an organization that has changed the way he feels about the ball club that has rivaled Boston for ages.

"I have seen the passion of the people throughout this organization," says Lucci. "This is not a transaction for them. It is a way of life."

ernment, and he feels that it needs an active citizenry in order to be effective. It is his philosophy that the Board of Selectmen should be more of an "organizational" group that researches and gathers facts and presents them to the citizens, so that they may decide the best direction in which the town should head. Too often, senses Sagal, residents of Wilmington feel as though the selectmen make choices for them and expect their constituents to "sign off" on their decisions.

"The selectmen should be a group of people who collect data and present it in a functional format to the people, so that they can decide what to do," says Sagal.

Sagal has noted animosity between residents and the town government. He is hoping to join the board and foster a more neutral tone.

"I know it's small town politics," says Sagal, "but things don't need to be political."

Sullivan, who was born and raised in Lynn, moved to Wilmington to raise her family in 1989. She has served on the Open Space and Recreation Committee, the Citizens Advisory Committee for the Water Resource Management Plan and the Department of Environmental Protection/Upper Ipswich River Committee.

According to Sullivan, the contamination involved with the town's water supply is the biggest issue in the community.

"Water resources are something that we can't do without," says Sullivan. "I have spent much time advocating for the environment through advocacy groups by examining contamination issues and impacts to the environment and Wilmington residents. I believe in smart, sustainable growth that protects the town's environment, but is also financially prudent."

Sullivan was one of the two petitioners who had requested the Board of Selectmen to schedule the Special Town Meeting that was held earlier this month. One article that Sullivan helped bring forth was passed by residents and succeeded in rescinding plans to construct a new library at the old Whitefield School in North Wilmington. A second article, which failed, was also partially authored by Sullivan and sought to have a new library instead be built at the Swain School on Middlesex Avenue.

Sullivan sees herself as being free from political ties. Therefore, she maintains that she would be an "independent" member of the Board of Selectmen.

"A lot of people are looking to me to help keep facilitating change in the town," Sullivan says. "We're on the horizon of change in Wilmington. A lot of people feel like they don't have a voice, and that's where a lot of apathy comes from. People know that I am going to work for democracy."

Selectmen Chairman Robert Cain formally announced the vacancy on the board during a meeting on August 12. At its meeting on Monday, September 9, the board will discuss the candidates that each member wishes to nominate for the position.

According to the website for the State Department of Health, there is not a vaccine for West Nile Virus, so the following precautions should be taken to lessen the risk of coming into contact with mosquitoes that carry the disease:

- Avoid outdoor activities between dusk and dawn, if possible, since this is the time when mosquitoes are most active.

- If you must be outdoors when mosquitoes are active, wear a long-sleeved shirt and long pants.

- Use a mosquito repellent that contains DEET and follow the directions on the label. DEET can be toxic if overused. Never use DEET on infants and do not apply repellents to the face or hands of children.

Avoid using repellents with DEET concentrations above 10 to 15 percent for children and with concentrations above 30 or 35 percent for adults. Cream, lotion or stick formulas are best for use on the skin. However, avoid products with high amounts of alcohol, as these may be absorbed through the skin.

- Most mosquito repellents will remain effective for many hours, so it is not necessary to reapply the repellent. Once inside, wash off insect repellents thoroughly with soap and water.

- Take special care to cover up the arms and legs of children playing outdoors. When you bring a baby outdoors, cover the baby's carriage or playpen with mosquito netting.

- Fix any holes in screens and make sure that they are tightly attached to all doors and windows.

According to MDPH, mosquitoes tend to breed in puddles and standing pools of water that have been around for more than four days. To help reduce the risk of mosquitoes breeding:

- Routinely empty metal cans, plastic containers, ceramic pots and trash cans;
- Pay special attention to discarded tires;

- Drill holes in the bottom of recycling containers that are left outdoors, so that water may be drained out of them;
- Clean clogged roof gutters;

- Turn over plastic wading pools and wheel barrows when neither is in use;

- Do not allow water to stagnate in bird baths;
- Aerate ornamental ponds or stock them with fish;

- Keep swimming pools clean and properly chlorinated and remove standing water from pool covers;

- Use landscaping to eliminate standing water that collects on your property.

The state's website, which is updated daily, tracks the number of dead birds found, tested, and identified as positive for the virus. Residents who have found a dead bird or who seek further information about the virus should contact the site at <http://www.state.ma.us/dph/wnv/wnv1.htm> or call 1-866-MASS WNV.

CONGRATULATIONS TO THE BROADWAY DANCE TEAMS - 2002 NATIONAL CHAMPIONS!!

Tewksbury All Stars tops in Methuen West tourney

The Tewksbury American Little League 10 year old All Stars recently defeated a very tough Atkinson, N.H. team to win their second consecutive Methuen West Tournament championship, 4-3. The American 10's jumped out in front in the third inning when James Malcolm walked, stole second and after a walk to Nick Rose, Kevin White doubled Malcolm home for the first run. Sean Kieran followed that with a double to left, drove home Rose while White was thrown out at the plate on a very close play.

Tewksbury loaded the bases after a single by Kyle Thomas, Mike Fabiano getting hit by a pitch and Shawn Bradley working a great at bat to draw a walk and force Kieran home for the third run of the inning. Atkinson kept scratching back and brought the score to 3-1 after four, but Jeffrey Oberg (nine strikeouts including three in the last inning) pitched marvelously for the winners. Tewksbury stretched its lead with a very important run in the fifth inning as Mike Amaral led off with a single to center and stole second. Sean Kieran hit a bullet down the first base line, but the first baseman stabbed it and his only play was to first, Amaral took third. Kyle Thomas followed it with a sharp single up the middle, driving in what proved to be the winning run.

Oberg got great defensive help along the way. James Malcolm let Atkinson know that Tewksbury could throw the leather around as he made a great catch in right field in the first inning that set the defensive tone of the game. Kevin White made two outstanding plays at short, going into shallow left to snare a popup over his shoulder and diving to his right to catch a line drive headed to left field. Kevin was awesome at short all game long, very steady and coming up with the big play when needed. Kyle Thomas made two very good plays at third base, cutting off balls hit between third and short and throwing them out.

Sean Kieran made a gutsy but key play in the fifth as Atkinson led off with a single and stole second.

The next batter hit a solid one hopper to Sean at first who fired a bullet to third to nail a very surprised Atkinson runner for a very big out. Oberg responded by getting the next two batters and the Atkinson rally fizzled. Joseph Borges and Brendan Kieran both made key plays in the outfield after Atkinson hits by getting the ball in quickly and preventing runners from getting into scoring position. Nicky Rose had a great game behind the plate, as no Atkinson runs were scored on passed balls, a huge help to the pitcher, and almost unheard of at the 10 year old level.

Atkinson did manage to rally for two more in the last inning to close the gap to 4-3, but Jeffrey shut the door and the ball game was over. Offensive leaders were Kevin White, Sean Kieran and Kyle Thomas who all had two hits and drove in a run. Jeff Oberg and Sean Kieran both received game balls for their outstanding effort and leadership on the field.

Along the way, Tewksbury had to beat some very fine teams in the playoffs. They started against the Tewksbury National 10's an outstanding team and champions themselves of the Chelmsford and Tewksbury tournaments. Mike Amaral was a one man show that day as he pitched a shutout, striking out nine, had three hits including a home run and drove in three runs. Kevin White also had three hits and drove in a run while Mike Fabiano had two hits and Brendan Kieran doubled home two runs. Mike Amaral won a game ball for his phenomenal game.

The next game was against Methuen East who were undefeated all summer at the time and won the District 14 championship later that week. Kevin White had an outstanding game pitching as he struck out nine and held Methuen to five hits in an 8-5 upset win. Kevin also contributed two hits while Shawn Bradley, Mike Fabiano and Sean Kieran all drove in runs. Tewksbury owned that base paths as they ran like deers and scored five runs by either stealing home (Oberg) or coming home on passed balls (White, Amaral, Thomas and Oberg). Kyle Thomas had a great game at shortstop and Shawn Bradley and Joe Samson put on a clinic at second base with great plays in clutch situations. Chris Santos also made a great play at third and Sean Kieran had seven putouts at first, some where he really had to stretch to get the out. Kevin White got the game ball as for his outstanding pitching, clutch hitting and aggressive base running.

In the preliminary rounds, Tewksbury drilled Seabrook 15-2 as Kevin White had four hits and one rbi, Jeff Oberg had three hits and four rbi, Sean Kieran had three hits and three rbi, Justin Chotkowski added one hit and one rbi and James Malcolm, Chris Santos, Joe Samson and Mike Amaral all chipped in with hits. In game two, the American's ran into a buzz saw as Atkinson, N.H., the team they eventually beat in the final, held them to three hits, one each by Oberg, Sean Kieran and Samson. Oberg and White combined to pitch a good game, holding the score to 1-0 until the bottom of the fifth when Atkinson scored five runs to pull away. Against Andover Nationals, the team that eventually knocked both Tewksbury teams out of the District 14 tournament, the Americans got good pitching from Sean Kieran and Mike Amaral as the score was tied through five 3-3, but Andover jumped on Tewksbury for seven runs in the top of the sixth to pull away 10-3. Kyle Thomas, Joseph Borges and Kevin White all drove in runs while Mike Fabiano, Justin Chotkowski, Shawn Bradley, Chris Santos and Kyle Thomas all chipped in with hits.

Kevin White led the American attack during the tournament hitting an unbelievable .600 with 12 hits, while Jeff Oberg and Sean Kieran each had seven hits. Kyle Thomas and Chris Santos, both hit over .400 while Mike Amaral had five hits and batted .357. Amaral and Sean Kieran led the team in rbis, hitting in five apiece while Oberg and White were close behind with four each. The only home run was hit by Amaral, but it was a beauty. White led the team in scoring too as he crossed the plate eight times for the champs. Amaral scored five times while Oberg, Sean Kieran and Thomas each scored four times and Joseph Borges chipped in with three runs scored.

The pitching was handled by Oberg, White, Amaral and Sean Kieran. Defensively, Tewksbury was outstanding and should be very proud of the way they played the field. Kyle Thomas had several great games both at short and third, including the first inning against Methuen East as he handled three hard shots and threw out all three runners. Kevin White was outstanding at shortstop handling all the routine plays and making some circus plays to entertain the crowd.

Joe Samson and Shawn Bradley were magnificent at second

Wilmington athletes help power team to state title

AMHERST - The Burlington "United" U19 girl's team overpowered rival United Club of the Berkshires (U.C.B.) 5-1 to capture the girl's under 19 state soccer title at the Massachusetts Tournament of Champions at the University of Mass. in Amherst.

"I am so proud of the girls," said Head Coach, Matt Cotter. "They played like champions. They deserve it."

Wilmington residents Diane Dellascio, Cristina DeSimone, Lauren Rappoli and Ashley Steenbruggen were valuable members of the team. Steenbruggen netted two goals in the championship game - including the game winner - with Rappoli assisting on one. Tri-captain Dellascio aggressively controlled the midfield. Tri-captain Cristina DeSimone garnered Most Valuable Player honors of the entire state tournament.

"They all stepped up their games," continued Coach Cotter. "You can talk and talk and talk about what needs to be done, but it's action that matters. They brought it today. They sure did!!!"

United advanced to the state final by beating Weymouth (3-1) in the state semi-final game. The girls finished 2-1-0 in group play and secured the number two seed entering the tournament's final day. They beat Plymouth (8-0) and Danvers (1-0). The single loss came to U.C.B. (3-1) on Saturday, as U.C.B. needed the win to advance while United had already clinched a berth in the semi-finals.

"Ashley gave us some nice scoring on Sunday (one goal in the semi's; two in the finals; both game winners). She really played big. Lauren was very active in the midfield, applying nice pressure on both the offensive and the defensive ends."

"But Diane and Cristina... What can you say? They're two of our captains. They led the girls. They let their strong, consistent play set the tone. Either could have won MVP."

United (11-2-1) was playing in the state finals for the second time in three years.

Schena Soccer (Roughriders) qualify for playoffs

Schena Soccer, of Tewksbury, completed a 14 game schedule with the Eastern Mass. Womens Soccer League of the greater Boston Area. Schena Soccer has participated in this league since 1984. The team is comprised of college and ex-college players from the local and North Shore area.

On Wednesday, July 31, Schena Soccer traveled to Phillips Park, Swampscott, to play the North Shore 1 team to determine who will be in the playoffs. About midway thru the first half Kristin Macdonald, of Beverly, received the ball on the right side of the goal and spun and let go a left foot kick to the far post and scored what was to be the only goal of the game.

Schena Soccer edged the North Shore 1 team by a 1-0 score and the right to play Suburban Thunder, of Newton, in the first round of the playoffs. The goaltender in this game for Schena, Caitlin Pickul, from N. Andover made 12 saves in the game.

Monday Aug. 5 Schena Soccer traveled to Weeks Field, Newton, to play the Suburban Thunder womens soccer team, who finished first in the South section undefeated.

About 20 minutes into the first half there was a miscommunication between the Schena team defensive backs, as a result, a Thunbase, doing all the little things that often go unnoticed but help keep runners from getting in scoring position like getting relays in quickly from the outfield. Chris Santos had some great games at third base, playing this position for the first time in this tournament and coming up big game after game. The outfield was patrolled by Mike Amaral, who made several big catches in center, Mike Fabiano, Brendan Kieran, Justin Chotkowski, James Malcolm, Tommy Goggins and Joseph Borges who all played outstanding defense making catches, getting in throws quickly to the cutoff men and backing up bases to prevent runners from advancing on overthrows. Nick Rose and Jeffrey Oberg were superb behind the plate, helping their pitchers with their leadership and they allowed very few runners to score on passed balls and very few runners to steal bases. Sean Kieran was simply magnificent at first base as he handled almost 40 chances at first base in this tournament without making an error and throwing two runners out at third base, one for a double play.

The Tewksbury American 10 coaching staff of Dan Kieran, Royd Oberg, Dennis White and Tom

Fabiano want to express how proud they are of this group of kids who played outstanding baseball and showed tremendous sportsmanship both in victory and in defeat. Like this year's Super Bowl champion New England Patriots, they believed in themselves and their talent and commitment carried them through to their goal. They played as a team and supported each other very well. They would also like to thank the parents for all their support this summer in attending all the games and getting their kids to practice. Attendance at both was outstanding.

ier player was virtually left uncovered in front of the goal, for an easy tap in. At half time Suburban Thunder led 1-0.

In the second half Schena team had their chances as Lis Dellascio, of Wilmington, received a pass at the top of the 18 yard box and let go a beautiful left footed shot, that looked like a sure goal, only to see it caromed off the cross bar and over the goal. They had numerous other chances but couldn't put the ball in the net. With the score still 1-0 with about 8 minutes left in the game, Schena changed their offensive alignment going for the ying goal, but it backfired as the Thunder team was able to score in quick transition making the final score 2-0 Suburban Thunder. They eventually won the EMWSL championship game against the Boston Renegades at Boston University's Nickerson field on Aug. 10.

Local players on the Schena Soccer team, the Dellascio sisters, of Wilmington, Lisa a co-captain of this falls Salem State soccer team and Diane an incoming freshman at Salem State. Also from Wilmington, Cristina DeSimone, who will be a sophomore at Stonehill College and participated this past spring with the Burlington United under 19 team that won the state championship at the Univ. of Mass. MOTC. She also received the MVP award.

Other participating members included: Lis Andruszkiewicz, Beverly, Wellesley College, Brigid Burke, Bowdoin College, Stephanie Carlin of Burlington, Boston University, Kristin Macdonald, Indiana/Perdue, Nicole Cote, asst coach Salem State, Meghan King, Fairfield Univ. Michelle Caporale, Salem State, Alison Corey, Merrimack College, Adria Dennison, Lisa Gianis, Holly Soper who graduated this past spring from Stonehill College, Kara Diggins of Burlington incoming freshman at Assumption College, Meg Macumber, incoming freshman at Western Maryland, Diana Petersen, Bentley College, Caitlin Pickul, incoming freshman at Prov. Univ., Maryann Quinn, graduate Salem State, and last but not least Alexandra (Al) Shube who will be a senior goalkeeper at Marblehead High this fall, also Meghan Trecco, Hiram College of Ohio.

All in all they did well and they deserve congratulations for making the playoffs and especially playing in this very hot summer weather we have had.

Part two - motorcycle adventure

4600 mile arctic journey

(A love for motorcycles prompted Wilmington's Keith D'Entremont to take a different type of summer vacation this year—a road trip to Inuvik in Canada's Northwest Territories. He and four companions braved the rough roads and isolation of the pristine Canadian wilderness with their bikes on a journey that would take them past the Arctic Circle to the farthest northern point they could travel. In today's installment, the group's already nearly 2000 miles into the trip and they decide on a rest day, so D'Entremont heads off alone on winding dirt road for some fishing in the Yukon.)

By MARIE BRENNAN

Fishing in the Yukon.

Later, D'Entremont discovers the wonders of duct tape as he patches his motorcycle. The job takes him two hours. He flinches from his bruises, noting he's a bit more sore from his spill than expected and for the first time is concerned he won't be able to continue.

The next morning he's stiff, "and a little shy" about riding. His face shield is scratched from wiping out and no replacement is available. Finding it difficult to see, he joins the group for a 388 mile rainy run into Dawson City in the Yukon. The farther north they reach, the more isolated the country becomes. The CB radios they brought don't work in this territory and the men communicate through hand signals.

D'Entremont learns to appreciate the rule that while the riders may split up occasionally, they're never left on their own. "The rider ahead is responsible for the rider behind," he said, and that means waiting at a check point and back tracking for the other person if needed.

The usual meeting place is the fuel/food stations that sparsely dot the roads along the way.

"We never met a truck stop we didn't like," he quipped and the infrequent breaks afford them some time for conversation, and the usual food is a burger or bacon and eggs. At the stops, they meet with local natives, who are inquisitive about their journey to Inuvik.

"We were something of a curiosity when we came to town. We tell them where we're heading and they ask 'Why are you going there? There's nothing there.' We answer, 'That's just what we're looking for.'"

Road and weather conditions of the scarcely populated areas surrounding them were a common topic between the riders and the natives who were concerned about their safety.

"They were very helpful. There's a common rule that if you live in the wilderness, you watch out for one another because you might be the one hurt tomorrow," observed D'Entremont.

On June 20, they exit Dawson City with cloudy skies above them and start on a long and lonely stretch of road called the Dempster Highway. "A local wag called it the 'dumpster highway.' It's a well-founded concern. The road is 477 miles into the wild and the same back again. We're getting better at reading the road conditions and the Dempster looks as though it gets nasty when wet. Especially for a motorcycle, sharp surveillance is mandatory."

Using caution, the men reach the crossing into the Arctic Circle, a defined area on a globe at 66 degrees, 30 minutes north latitude, which marks the true entrance into the region. On the Dempster Highway, the Arctic Circle is identified by a small road sign and rest stop and little else. Still, "It's a milestone," for the men, said D'Entremont. "Here we are, in a place not many

ANTHONY MANCONI

AUNT NORA and I agree on only ONE thing, we both HATE LO-O-ONG MOTOR MOUTH SERMONS. One morning father Dennis Nason was indeed extra long and Uncle John Shea got up and walked OUT in the middle of the sermon.

After mass shaking hands with parishoners, Father Nasom told Aunt Nora, "I hope I didn't offend your brother" "no indeed" Aunt Nora said. "One of his better traits is he is a sleep walker!"...

Movie Reviews

XXX mildly amusing

by Paul Feely

MOVIE: "XXX"
GRADE: **

Review: Mildly amusing, this action-adventure film is good for a few mindless minutes in a air-conditioned theater on a hot afternoon.

Vin Diesel plays the title character, nicknamed XXX, who is an extreme sports addict, always looking for a way he can get his next adrenaline rush performing an over-the-top stunt and scaring those unsuspecting souls around him.

In steps the United States government in the form of Samuel L. Jackson, who is sick of seeing his top agents killed and recruits XXX to work as the country's newest top spy. The very unbelievable plot takes over from there (as if it seems like a true-life documentary up to this point), as entire story angles are created just so Vin has something new to blow up.

The movie can't seem to decide whether it is a sendup or an homage to the James Bond movies, but Diesel's character can't deliver his one-liners with the same wit that someone like Pierce Brosnan, the current Bond, can. Not bad as an action flick, but this one isn't much else.

SHORTTAKES

MOVIE: "AUSTIN POWERS: GOLDMEMBER"
GRADE: ***

Review: Mike Myers returns as the international man of mystery, as well as a host of other characters, in this third installment of the popular comedic movie series.

Myers' humor fella bit flat in the last outing as Austin, but here he returns to the raunchy, witty humor that made the first movie such a hit. The new villain, Goldmember (also played by Myers) leaves much to be desired, but Michael Caine as Austin's often-absent father is a nice addition to the series. All the characters from previous installments return for a few laughs here, and the list of cameo appearances by some of Hollywood's top actors and actresses makes for an enjoyable afternoon at the theater.

MOVIE: "SIGNS"
GRADE: ***

Review: Mel Gibson heads up a strong cast in director M. Night Shyamalan's new psychological thriller.

Shyamalan, the man behind "The Sixth Sense" and "Unbreakable", has created what essentially amounts to a retelling of the classic movie "The War of the Worlds", but told from the

ANGEL WINGS, BIRDS OF A FEATHER, AND ONE CARD 'SHARP'

'Walk of Hope' in Wakefield

"The annual 'Walk of Hope' for ALS, hosted by the Angel Fund, an independent, nonprofit organization dedicated to supporting ALS investigation at Massachusetts General Hospital, will be held on Saturday, September 14, 2002 in Wakefield, Massachusetts," notes the Wakefield edition of the "Daily Times Chronicle."

"The 3.5 mile walk around Lake Quannapowitt is sponsored by the law firm of Nigro, Pettepit & Lucas. The event begins with registration on Wakefield Common at 9 a.m. followed by the walk at 11 a.m.

"Proceeds from the event will support Amyotrophic Lateral Sclerosis research at the Cecil B. Day Neuromuscular Research Center at the Massachusetts General Hospital, run by Dr. Robert H. Brown, Jr.

"ALS, more commonly known as Lou Gehrig's Disease, is a progressive, always fatal neuromuscular disease. ALS leads to muscle weakness and as it progresses, the result is total paralysis and the inability to speak and swallow while the mind and senses remain intact.

"The Angel Fund conducts fund raising events, which, along with individual and corporate donations, have been beneficial in helping make significant strides in ALS research at Mass General.

"Recent discoveries have improved understanding of the disease and have pointed to new concepts in ALS therapy. A gene defect causing one familial form of ALS was identified in the mid-90s that led to cell-based and animal models for ALS.

"As a result, researchers have been able to study the molecular biology of ALS and to test potential new treatments.

"There are several levels of sponsorship for the 'Walk of Hope,' including raising money through pledges as a walker, becoming a sponsor or corporate sponsor, or making an individual donation as a general contributor, sustaining member or as a member of Ginny's Angel Society, in honor of ALS patient Ginny DelVecchio, the driving force behind Angel Fund....

"To register as a walker, or to make a donation to the Angel Fund, please call Paul DelVecchio, Executive Director at (781) 279-1422, or Lisa Courtenay, Fund Administrator at (781) 245-4545, or log-on to either the organization's website at www.theangelfund.org or www.coolrunning.com.

"Donations can be made payable to The Angel Fund, c/o Lisa Courtenay, 649 Main Street, Wakefield, MA 01880."

'Sharecroppers' in Woburn

"The Woburn Residents' Environmental Network (WREN) has held the judging for the first Woburn Garden Awards, sending three teams to review some 60 gardens," notes the Woburn edition of the "Daily Times Chronicle."

"It was great. Everyone had a ball," said WREN member John Ciriello, noting when the judging teams arrived at many of the homes Saturday morning, the gardeners were very excited to get started.

"The gardeners ranged in age from 13 to 84.

"Ciriello said the quality of the gardens made judging very difficult, adding the number of gardens in the city was a pleasant surprise.

"Following judging, six winners were announced and nine honorable mentions were handed out.

"Rod Flynn, Fel Medeiros, and Gerry Kehoe were the three team leaders of the judging panels, with each team taking 20 gardens in different sections of the city.

"Then, each judging team selected their top two as winners and three honorable mentions.

"In September, a formal awards ceremony will be held honoring all winners and participants.

"Planning is underway for next year's event. (This year's winners will not be eligible for consideration, so the field will be wide open for a new crop of gardeners.)" people will ever see. It's not really even a place, it's a mythical concept. "They are in the Arctic. It's the summer season of constant light and the weather is mild, dry and temperatures in the 40's. But the break in the frost that comes with Arctic summer brings an unexpected nuisance upon the land that the riders are quickly made aware of - mosquitoes thrive at this time and they become the group's constant companions.

D'Entremont

"I've never seen more mosquitoes. It turns out that these are the ideal breeding conditions for the detestable little creatures. No one even takes their helmet off for a photo, the bugs are so thick," said D'Entremont. They take refuge from the insects in the screened pavilion at the impressively clean grounds in a camp in Rock River.

On June 22, they awake to clouds and drizzle and quietly pack. D'Entremont recalls the road conditions as "awful for a motorcycle." Viewing an upcoming stop that separates the Yukon from the Northwest Territories, the situation looks even worse - the sky is white with snow to the north. They cautiously continue up the Dempster. The ride is wet and uncomfortable. "As you can imagine, riding a motorcycle in a snowstorm is not a good idea," deadpanned D'Entremont.

He, Hibbard and Baccas move slightly ahead of Weaver and Mote and stop at the Peel River ferry where they have to board with their bike. In winter, the river is frozen and cars literally drive across the solid surface. In summer, however, the "ice bridge" melts and a ferry is needed to cross the water that separates this juncture of the highway.

Time passes and as they wait for the other two men, their concern grows. Two men in a pickup truck pull up, and D'Entremont asks the driver if he's seen a couple of bikes. He's chilled when the man replies, "Yeah. In the ditch, one's hurt bad." The driver has the ferry operator radio for help.

The men get on their bikes and head to the accident scene. They find Weaver by the side of the road, Mote is assisting him and things don't look good. Apparently, Weaver hit a pot hole, lost control and wiped out. "When we got back to him, he was on an embankment, half sitting, half prone. He was wrapped in his tent and his sleeping bag trying to stay warm... He was in severe pain and kind of lapsing in and out of consciousness."

The Mounties send medical aid, an "ambulance" in the form of a van with a stretcher. The plan is to transport him to Fort McPherson, afterwards Weaver will be med-evacuated to Inuvik, to Calgary, then to a hospital near his home in Salt Lake City. He has three broken ribs, his condition appears stable but internal injuries are possible.

The accident is a sobering episode for them. "You don't embark on these things thinking you're going to get hurt... You embark on the trip thinking 'Isn't this going to be great,' and we're all going to have stories to tell. But, here was reality. Things can happen," said D'Entremont.

The following morning, June 23, is a beautiful, dry windy Sunday and now that Weaver is safely on his way, the men return to what now seems less a joy and a little more of a mission. They are determined to reach their final, most northern destination, where the Dempster Highway halts in the village of Inuvik.

They drive to the outskirts of town to the end of the highway and the men can see only a shrubby green ridge extending for miles in front of them. There aren't any tall trees, they don't grow this far in the Arctic. Beyond the ridge, but unseen from this point, is the Beaufort Sea, which leads to the Arctic Ocean.

They are here at last and the men are filled with exhilaration. The weather's hot, dry and clear.

D'Entremont poses for a picture at the Inuvik welcome sign and he smiles, removing his helmet this time, mosquitoes be damned. The riders tour the town's small museum, write postcards, book a float plane tour for the next day and eat caribou for dinner.

D'Entremont also feels almost a sense of sadness that "This is it. We made it. That's the end of the road." He remembers thinking, "There's really no other reason to be there except to say 'I came here' and now you turn around and go back." This far north, different observations come to him. The sheer desolation and elegant beauty of the unspoiled country they've traveled is amazing. The consistency of the midnight sun he's experienced during the trip is eerie.

"The sun does not set. It does not come close. It makes a lazy circle over our heads in a 24 hour period. We see the full moon on one horizon while the sun occupies another... It's weird, and it affects the natives. Time as we know it has little meaning. If you're tired, you go to bed, if you're hungry, you eat."

The next day, the wind portends bad weather and their plane tour is canceled. The men are disappointed, the flight meant an opportunity to glimpse the Arctic sea and to view the migrating herds of caribou who live in the ridge. The riders decide to pack up and head south.

They're back on the Dempster Highway. D'Entremont blows his rear tire twice on the sharp shale of the road. The patch kits do their job. The weather's cold and windy and there's damp areas in the road from an earlier rain. A few miles short of Eagle Plains, D'Entremont hits an odd spot of clay and his bike goes down hard and fast.

He awakens by the roadside and sees Hibbard has crashed as well but is up and walking gingerly.

D'Entremont is dazed and hurt, and his motorcycle is not to be seen. Despite the seriousness of the situation, he comically imagines his bike is off being devoured somewhere by the relentless mosquitoes.

He suspects he's cracked a couple of ribs and is sore but no medical attention is needed. He credits his riding suit for his lack of injuries. "It's designed for protection. It did its job and my helmet did its job."

His bike however, didn't withstand the crash as well and this time no amount of duct tape can salvage the damage. The electrical system is blown, parts aren't available and D'Entremont knows he's out of the road trip for good. He calls Sue, doesn't let on that he's hurt, and mentions "he'll be home a little earlier than expected."

But first, he wonders to himself, how's that going to happen. He's stuck in Eagle Plains, a one building town designed to give truckers a place to refuel, eat and sleep. D'Entremont makes a little sign that says "Whitehorse" and hangs out at the truck stop, hoping to meet a south bound driver willing to haul both him and his broken bike to that city.

who can't draw a straight line with a ruler," she says with a laugh. "So for me, the stamps not only looked great, but they were also very easy to use."

"Gayle soon discovered the art of making one's own greeting cards using stamps. When she saw how friends and family delighted in receiving the handmade greetings, she knew she had found a hobby that was not only fun and easy, but a great outlet for creative expression.

"I started looking on the Internet and in craft stores for ideas for cards and other projects," Gayle says. "You can really use stamps on anything - candles, walls, gift bags and wrapping paper. There are so many things you can do...."

A tough-looking, scruffy bearded man in denim notices the sign. After hearing about his problem, he asks "What kind of bike?" D'Entremont knows this is a Harley Davidson kind of guy as he answers "a BMW." The trucker heads into the restaurant, mumbling he'll think about taking him to Whitehorse.

After his meal, the man returns and says simply, "Okay." He introduces himself as Al, no last name is given. He arranges for a Bobcat to lift the beaten BMW into his purple 18-wheeler and motions for D'Entremont to join him up front and they start their 500 mile drive.

For prostate patients

New, improved treatment

Imagine standing before a group of corporate executives while you are making a presentation, or playing a round of golf, when all of a sudden you are not able to hold your bowel functions.

Imagine having to worry all the time about limiting what appointments you can keep because you suffer from urinary incontinence, rectal bleeding or diarrhea.

For thousands of men undergoing therapy for organ confined prostate cancer this is common. Now a treatment method that directs many high dose, pencil-thin beams of radiation to a cancerous tumor, in combination with seed implantation, has proved successful in virtually eliminating these therapy side effects.

"The first thing prostate cancer patients worry about is whether they can be cured," said Glen Gejerman M.D., clinical director of the Department of Radiation Oncology at Hackensack University Medical Center in New Jersey.

"Once they feel confident of that, the next step is how the therapy is going to impact their lifestyles. They ask, 'Am I going to have to constantly run to the bathroom to urinate? Will I have diarrhea? Can I do my job? Am I going to be embarrassed?' These are very real thoughts that go through the patients' minds."

Now hundreds of prostate cancer patients that are undergoing therapy at Hackensack University Medical Center have daily treatments Monday Through Friday over a six-week period. Treatments take 20 minutes to deliver and have no immediate after effects.

"For a patient who works a full day and who comes in the morning to the hospital to get his treatment, the last thing he needs is diarrhea or rectal irritation when he is in a meeting later that day," Dr. Gejerman said. "We have virtually eliminated these short term side effects."

"The bottom line is that with intensity modulated radiation therapy (IMRT) combined with Theraseed® palladium radioactive seed implantation, we are giving the patient confidence to know that he can receive aggressive cancer treatment and not have to worry that he won't be able to cope with toxicity."

Since the palladium seeds are placed directly in to the prostate gland, the surrounding rectum and bladder receive very little radiation dose, according to Dr. Gejerman.

"Most patients want aggressive cancer therapy but want to minimize side effects," said Dr. Gejerman. "Many patients are quite informed and ask for the new palladium seed implants because they release radiation quickly resulting in a higher dose released over a shorter period of time."

Because the palladium seed is a higher-dose, faster-acting implant, patients treated with palladium implants have side effects lasting two to three months and are advised to observe radiation precautions.

This includes staying six feet away from pregnant women and children for six weeks.

Patients implanted with iodine seeds have side effects lasting up to 6 to 8 months are advised to observe radiation precautions for five months.

In a study presented this month at the American Radium Society meeting in London, Dr. Gejerman said that IMRT when compared to standard radiation treatment was found to give a higher dose radiation to the prostate gland and a lower dose to the bladder and rectum with fewer side effects.

While Hackensack University Medical Center's study was limited to the initial 65 patients treated, a total of 200 patients have been treated without the typical side effects such as diarrhea and rectal bleeding.

Hackensack University Medical Center is one of a few facilities in the country delivering IMRT and seed implantation in large numbers, according to Gejerman.

More information about The Prostate Cancer Institute of New Jersey at Hackensack University Medical Center can be found on the Institute's Web site at www.prostatecancerj.org or call the Institute at 201-996-2034.

Dental problems can hinder kids learning

Dental problems such as decay and trauma can cause schoolchildren severe pain and keep them from learning in the classroom. And sometimes these problems keep them out of the classroom altogether. The fact is, U.S. children lose an estimated 51 million school hours each year due to dental-related illness.

"Painful, chronic dental problems can hurt a student's ability to thrive," said Robert Compton, D.D.S., oral health advisor for Delta Dental Plans Association. "Early tooth loss due to decay can impair speech development, and students may fall behind in schoolwork due to increased absences. When they are in school, students experiencing dental pain may have trouble concentrating and learning."

School nurses report a range of dental problems in children they see, including dental caries, gum disease, poor bite, loose teeth and oral trauma. Children from low income families are hardest-hit with oral health problems suffering nearly five times as much dental caries as children from higher-income families, according to the U.S. General Accounting Office. If left untreated, the pain and infection from these oral health problems can lead to trouble eating, speaking and learning.

Students with chronic dental pain aren't always able to verbalize it. Teachers may notice that student is anxious, depressed or fatigued, but not automatically recognize these behaviors as manifestations of physical pain. When children's dental problems are treated and they are no longer in pain, both their learning and school attendance records improve, according to the American Journal of Public Health.

"The start of a new school year is a good time to evaluate your children's dental health and habits. It may be time for a check up and a new toothbrush," said Dr. Compton. "Checking oral health is as important as booster shots and should be part of regular back-to-school preparations."

Even with regular checkups, dentists recommend that parents periodically check their children's mouths for signs of periodontal disease, including bleeding, swollen and/or bright red gums, persistent bad breath and gums that have receded from teeth.

There are no limits to caring.™

Discipline time: balance and consistency

Not long ago, the discipline of children was based on one adage: Spare the rod and you spoil the child. Today, most parents and caregivers have discontinued the use of corporal punishment as a means to correct a child's negative behavior. However, there remains much confusion about what constitutes suitable and effective discipline.

It is important to remember that most children misbehave from time to time but that they also respond to appropriate verbal warnings, praise and reprimands. Most children will correct their behavior to win their parents' approval and praise. But the rare child who is either indifferent to parental censure, or who is truly unable to control behavior, may be exhibiting a serious behavior disorder that requires professional treatment.

Some hitting, and even a little biting, is typical and normal during the toddler years. The fact that this conduct is normal, however, does not mean that parents and other caregivers do not play a role in the development of more appropriate social behavior. With each passing year of a child's life, physical aggression should diminish and finally cease by the school years, as self-control and social skills mature.

One of the greatest challenges to effective discipline is having expectations and ways of teaching that fit a child's developmental level. For children under 2, supervision and distraction are the most effective tools. This means constant supervision and kind, yet firm removal of the child from troublesome situations. Reprimands for severe misbehavior, such as biting, are also appropriate. As the child matures, time-outs and expressions of parental disapproval become more effective. Older children have the verbal ability to understand rules and the reasoning capacity to explicitly link their behavior with specific consequence. It is important not only to discourage problem behavior with such methods as "time-out" and loss of privileges, but also to teach children behaviors that would be more appropriate.

If your child is over 4 and has problems with self-control, aggression, hyperactivity or impulse control - consultation may help to identify if treatment is indicated. Sometimes a child will need the help of both medication and psychological counseling to improve behavioral controls. If your child exhibits guilt after an infraction and still seeks your approval, this is a positive sign that consistent discipline and rewards may be helpful.

By recognizing and complimenting positive behavior, parents can prevent many problems. If you see your child sharing a favorite toy, praise him by saying, "That was nice of you to share. You're getting good at making friends." Along with his parent's approval, your child receives the reward of friendship - his friend will be more eager to play with him. It's so easy to fall into the practice of responding to transgressions: After all, a child's temper tantrum commands a lot more attention than her demonstration of courtesy and compliance. By announcing pleasure when your child handles situations with self-control, composure and politeness, you reinforce and promote his positive conduct.

Think of discipline as the process by which we help children to learn to use appropriate self-control and to be considerate of the rights and needs of others. Remember, it's a process over time. If your child's misdeeds have previously gone unchallenged, it's unreasonable to think you can correct the behavior overnight. With time, patience and consistency, together you and your child are on the path to developing responsible behavior and a happy family life.

Violence intervention important for children

There are many ways parents can help protect a child from getting involved with violence.

Early intervention is important, since violent behavior is often learned early in life.

But, just as children can learn to be violent, they can also learn to be kind-hearted. Children can learn constructive ways to solve problems, deal with disagreements and handle anger.

Children who learn these skills early in life actually are learning violence prevention.

With these skills, children are far less likely to grow up to be violent, or to be the victims of violence.

Children learn by watching the people around them. Your child learns by watching the characters on television, in videos and movies - and, most of all, by watching you.

Everyone gets angry at times - it's part of being

Sports teach life lessons

Sports participation enhances physical fitness during childhood and helps develop healthy habits for adulthood. Through sports, a child gains experience in cooperation, self-discipline and perseverance while having a good time playing games.

The best sport for a child is one that he or she finds fun and interesting. Expose your child to a variety of physical activities and let the child's desires and abilities act as a guide to further commitment. No matter what a child's athletic interests are - baseball, soccer, tae kwon do or basketball - he or she is likely to find a sport to enjoy. Your child will need you more than ever for support and advice in weathering the ups and downs that go along with sports. To help your youngster build confidence and have fun, get involved in your child's endeavor and keep a good attitude.

In organized sports, teach your child that involvement means certain responsibilities are required - for one's self and the other participants. Encourage your child to give his best effort possible, to be responsible and to respect teammates, coaches and opponents - all lessons that are valuable in sports and life.

Parents can point out that mistakes are opportunities for valuable feedback on areas for improvement. But parents involved in their children's sports should avoid pushing too hard, overprotecting or academically delaying them for competitive reasons.

As a parent keep these things in mind:

- Understand that your child will make mistakes. Be calm.

- Attend practices and games or meets. Lend the players your support in a positive manner, and emphasize their accomplishments and efforts.

- Make your child feel important. Encourage contribution to a team effort.

- Be positive If your child is not performing correctly or improving, suggest an alternate technique with the coach's help.

- Provide transportation to and from all sports events and ensure your child is a player that is prompt not only in arriving but also in departing.

- Have your child bring the correct equipment to and from all games and practices.

For more information on preparing your child for sports, order the free Life Advice brochure "Your Child and Organized Sports" by calling 1-800-638-5433

Violence

human-but anger can get out of control. Children should learn that while it's okay to be angry, there are "okay" ways and "not okay" ways to show anger.

Helping a child to control angry feelings begins when you respond to the child's anger in a calm, respectful way.

When children get angry, families can:

- Calm an infant by holding and comforting the infant as well as removing or changing what caused the fussing.

- Encourage toddlers to use words to tell what they feel.

- Help preschoolers begin to learn and practice a self-calming method-taking a few deep breaths, sitting down, counting to 10 or repeating a phrase.

- Encourage kindergarten and elementary school youngsters to explain what happened and how they feel. Help them think about and tell ways to change the situation that caused the anger.

Information on early violence prevention is found in the Violence Prevention for Families of Young Children booklet, published by the American Psychological Association and the National Association for the Education of Young Children, as part of the ACT Against Violence project.

Movies

point of view of a family isolated on a farm.

Gibson plays a preacher in a small town in Pennsylvania, a man who has lost his faith after the accidental death of his wife in a traffic accident. A series of circles begin appearing in the corn field behind his house, coinciding with the appearance of these circles around the world. Is it a prank, a sign from above, or the work of aliens about to invade the world?

Shymalan does a masterful job of letting the audience in on the truth a little at a time, with some very suspenseful and genuinely scary moments. Gibson is very good, as is Joaquin Phoenix, who plays his younger brother who has come to the farm to help with his young niece and nephew, who are convinced that aliens are visiting their home each night.

The advertising campaign says that you shouldn't see this film alone, and that may be good advice to follow.

MOVIE: "STUART LITTLE 2"

GRADE: ***

Review: Michael J. Fox returns to voice the tiny hero of this charming children's movie.

The computer animation is so lifelike, you'll swear that mice, cats, and birds really can talk to humans, drive cars, and complete everyday tasks that the rest of us do.

The story centers around Stuart's need to find a playmate of his own, as his older human brother, again played by Jonathan Lipnicki, grows older and wants to spend time with his own friends. Stuart saves a wounded bird (voiced by Melanie Griffith), from the talons of a falcon (played by James Woods), and the two hit it off. He must team up again later with Snowbell the cat (voiced by Nathan Lane) to save her, and the ensuing misadventures make the kids happy, and bring a smile to their parents faces as well.

BUILDING BLOCKS AND CEMENTING CHARACTER

Definitely "n'okay" in Burlington

Town Meeting has rejected the idea of a kindergarten center at the Wildwood School, but in September representatives will be considering another article involving the former elementary facility," notes the Burlington edition of the "Daily Times Chronicle."

"One effect of the kindergarten center plan being turned down is to leave the property in the hands of the Board of Selectmen. With the kindergarten center proposal on the table, the facilities budget (under the jurisdiction of the selectmen) contained no funding for the Wildwood.

"Assistant Town Administrator Lawrence Rittenberg said an article for about $10,000 will be on the warrant for the Sept. 9 session in order to provide some degree of maintenance for the building. During discussion of the facilities budget, it was noted that the spending was 'tight' and Rittenberg said there are no funds available for the Wildwood.

"The Wildwood, located at the corner of Francis Wyman Road and Bedford Street, was closed as an elementary school in 1996.

"Since then, the building has deteriorated considerably with the main concern being the poor condition of the roof. The building has also been targeted by vandals...."

Absolutely okay in Stoneham

"The Massachusetts Hall of Fame for Science Educators is pleased to announce that Mr. Howard Dimmick of the Stoneham Public Schools was inducted into the Hall of Fame at the annual meeting of the Massachusetts Association of Science Supervisors," notes the "Stoneham Independent."

"Mr. Dimmick joins approximately 60 other Massachusetts science educators to be inducted since the inception of the Hall of Fame in 1992.

"This honor is reserved for teachers, pre-K through college, who have distinguished themselves as dedicated, exemplary educators over a long period of time.

"Howard's tireless efforts have had a lasting influence on many organizations both locally and nationally. He has been the President of the National Earth Science Teachers Association and the Massachusetts Association of Science Supervisors. He is presently the President of the Massachusetts Marine Educators.

"Howard's recent efforts have resulted in the Massachusetts Department of Education's retention of earth science at the high school level. He has contributed greatly to science education in the Commonwealth."

Making the grade in Wilmington

"Slackers beware!" notes the "Wilmington Town Crier."

"Not paying attention in class or skipping doing one's homework could really cost a Wilmington student this coming school year, especially if a new proposal concerning retention, promotion and individual accountability is completed and implemented as planned for the 2002-2003 academic year.

"Superintendent of Schools Dr. Geraldine O'Donnell is working with the School Committee to draw up a policy that deals with the retention and promotion of students from grade to grade, particularly for those who attend middle school. As mandated by Massachusetts General Law, the School Committee is working on its District Curriculum Accommodation Plan that will assist students of diverse learning abilities without just relying on the Special Education Department.

"At the meeting of the School Committee, O'Donnell stated that a sufficient policy does not exist in regards to when students are promoted or retained from one academic grade to another.

"Said O'Donnell, 'The lack of promotional requirements has resulted in significant problems because of the assumptions that are made by students and their parents that promotional decisions within the grades of the middle school and from grade eight to high school was not governed by achievements necessarily of academic standards.'

"One component of the proposal would be to retain any student who fails two or more core academic courses, such as Math, English, Science or Social Studies. A student may be promoted to the next academic year if he or she completes an approved summer school course for the course that was failed during the regular school year.

"Summer school can mean a day full of books instead of fun for students, but next year it could also mean empty wallets for their parents. As a budgetary measure, the possibility of charging students and their families for summer school is being pursued. However, the ability to pay for the luxury of going to school during the summer months may not be practical for everybody...."

Melissa Thornley graduated cum laude with a bachelor of science degree in journalism from the Park School of Communications. She had a minor in art history and a concentration in photo journalism.

President of the campus chapter of the Society of Professional Journalists, Thornley was previously inducted into Who's Who Among Students in American Colleges and Universities. A graduate of Woburn High School, she is a permanent resident of 28 Blueberry Hill Rd., Woburn, MA.

Chipper's advice to all recent graduates, remember you will never get a second chance to make a good first impression. I wasn't in the top half of my high school class, I was one of those people who make the top half possible. ...

I visited George Gould and I told him when I noticed the beautiful furniture, "George you have some beautiful antique furniture" "what are you nuts?" he said. "I bought all of this furniture new."

Richie Gillis opened up a new pet grooming salon. He put a sign in the window saying "If your pussy is in the mood, bring it in have it clipped, bathed and then shampooed." ...

Okay how do YOU answer the telephone? Wayne Hiden says "Joe's Poolroom 8-ball speaking." If it's a sales person Sonny Pearlman says, "Leave your message after the click." ...

The O'Hara sisters ask "Who is calling please?"

Now folks how do you end a conversation politely? BILL BURTON says, "Thanks for calling" Jane says "TOO-DO-LOO." Tony Stack says "Call again when IM NOT HOME." Aunt Nora told Steve Craven "ONE POUND OF PEANUT BRUTAL please." "excuse me Ma'am do you mean peanut brittle?" "Sonny" Aunt Nora replied "with my teeth its brutal!" ...

Folks I firmly believe "AMERICA IS THE BEST FRIEND THE WORLD HAS TODAY." "GOD BLESS AMERICA."

... On a south sea island trip a group of American tourists was captured and were interviewed by the cannibal chief. Robert Taber was asked "what do you do in the states?" Bob nervously replied "Sir, I'm an assistant editor of a newspaper." "Not to worry sonny," the chief smiling replied adding, "to-night YOU WILL BE EDITOR IN CHIEF!" ...

A PILOT walked into the passenger's cabin and announced, "the plane's FOUR ENGINES have been knocked OUT. The GOOD NEWS is, you LUGGAGE is on ANOTHER FLIGHT."

D'Entremont

From S-4

kindness doesn't just extend to his hitch hiker, "Here's this big rough and tumble trucker and there was a family of ptarmigan crossing the road at one point, Al brings the truck to a stop rather than disturb the ptarmigan."

After 12 hours, they arrive in Whitehorse. Al continues to be a good Samaritan, making arrangements for the bike and gear to be shipped back to Boston, and giving him a ride to the local airport. D'Entremont is thankful to the modest trucker who turns out to be his rescuer.

Exhausted, but happy, he flies home via Toronto to Boston on June 27. He's covered 3,033 miles and crossed the Arctic Circle. A line from a Jerry Garcia song fills his head, "What a long strange trip it's been."

When he returns, D'Entremont checks on Weaver and learns his friend is mending well. News trickles in from the remaining three riders. Hibbard, Mote and Baccas managed to complete the entire trip intact although their bikes suffered more than a few mechanical break downs. They're weary but elated at their success.

He also locates his motorcycle, which is now sitting in a New Hampshire dealership being diagnosed for possible reconstruction, so he's grounded from any more road trips for a while.

That's okay, he figures, he'll go fishing instead. He's already flown out west since his return from Inuvik to spend some time catching salmon off the coast of British Columbia, near Alaska. As a matter of fact, D'Entremont likes fishing almost as much as he likes motorcycles. But that's another story.

Key to long-lasting floors under surface

Whether you choose hardwood, laminate, vinyl, ceramic tile or carpeting, a beautiful floor treatment is key component in the overall design appeal to any room. But beauty goes only skin deep. The real key to beautiful, long-lasting floors lies beneath the surface.

While underlayments may not be glamorous, they definitely deserve close attention. Just like the padding installed under a carpet, the quality of the underlayment plays a major role in how well your floor will look and how long it will perform.

So if you tackle a construction or remodeling project this season, either on your own or with a builder or contractor, make sure that the underlayment you select will stand the test of time. Be especially careful when installing the underlayment and floor finish in areas of the home that are subject to moisture penetration, such as kitchens, entry foyers and baths.

Many builders and contractors use OSB (oriented strand board), plywood or lauan products as floor underlayments. However these traditional products have limitations, especially when compared to advanced new alternatives such as Fiberock® Brand Underlayment - AQUA-TOUGH from United States Gypsum Company. This unique moisture-resistant flooring underlayment is made from 100-percent recycled gypsum and cellulose. It can be used in both wet and dry areas of the home, and offers an environmentally friendly alternative to products made from wood harvested in old-growth forests.

FIBEROCK BRAND underlayment - aqua-tough resists moisture and is environmentally friendly

If you know that carpet will be installed throughout your home, OSB is suitable from a performance standpoint. However, if it is used under vinyl, OSB's rough surface may eventually show through. To remedy this situation, may contractors and builders install a 1/4 inch board of sanded lauan before laying down the vinyl.

A better alternative is FIBEROCK underlayment, which delivers up to 60 percent more indentation resistance than traditional products, while ensuring smooth, flat surface. Additionally, the panels don't contain resins, adhesives, solvents or dyes that can stain floor-covering materials.

Another issue with OSB, as well as other wood-based products, is the behavior of the underlayment when exposed to moisture. If they're exposed to moisture, some wood-based panels can swell and warp. Even simple mopping may eventually allow enough moisture to seep under floors around poorly sealed areas such as doorways and floor edges, causing deterioration of the adhesive and underlayment damage.

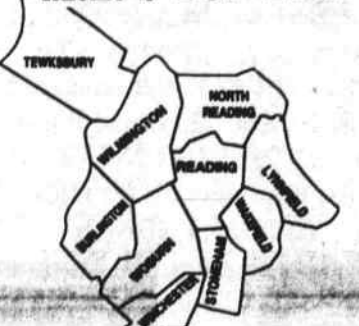

To avoid these problems, a water-resistant underlayment should be used from the start. FIBEROCK panels offer an ideal solution because their proprietary technology provides water resistance throughout the entire panel.

The structural integrity of an underlayment is vital to the performance of the floor covering. This is especially true for floor coverings that are sensitive to movement, such as ceramic tile systems. Swelling and warping of the underlayment can eventually lead to debonding or cracking of individual tiles.

Again, the best solution is to select a structurally superior alternative. The slightly higher initial cost will pay for itself over time, and your floors will stay looking brand new for years.

For more information about FIBEROCK Brand Underlayment - AQUA-TOUGH, contact United States Gypsum Company, 125 S. Franklin St., Chicago, IL 60606-4678, call 1-800-USG-FYOU

Great home for young family

Window shutters and horizontal wood siding give a ranch-style look to the Glenwood, and a governor's cupola at the apex of the garage roof adds to the charm. This compact home is ideal for young family or empty nesters needing less space than in the past.

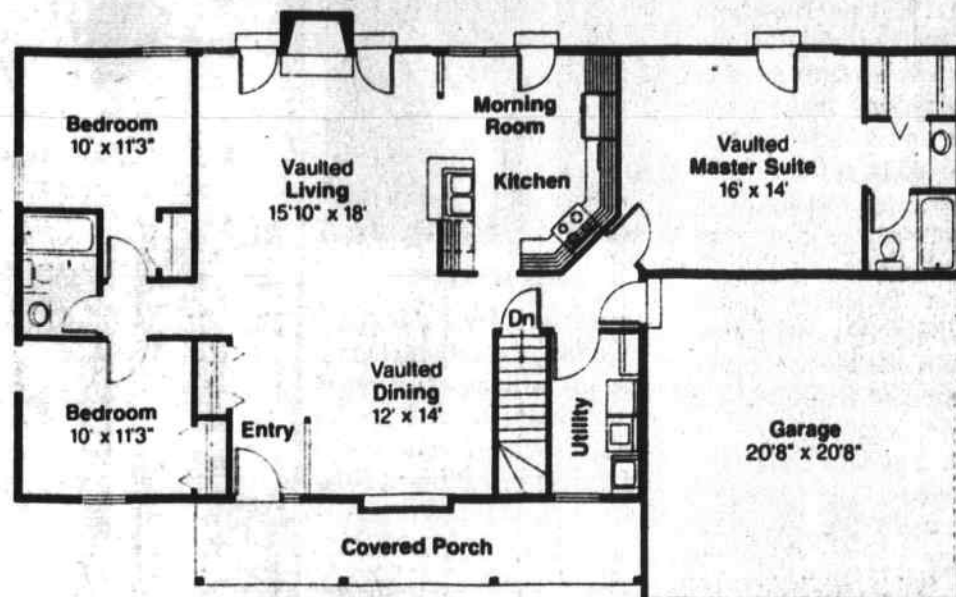

A covered porch spans most of the facade. If desired, it could be enclosed, providing a safe outdoor play area for toddlers or small dogs.

Entering, you step into vaulted and spacious open area with the dining room up front and the living room at the rear. The back wall is more windows than walls, here and in the morning room section of the kitchen as well. French doors that flank the fireplace offer patio access, and another French door in the morning room serves the same function.

Standing at the kitchen sink, you face into the living room. The raised eating bar that rims this peninsular counter is handy for snacking or chatting with people who are working in the kitchen. Counters and storage cabinets, including a pantry, are arrayed along three walls; appliances are built in.

Laundry appliances are close at hand in a good-sized utility room complete with a deep sink. You can do your hand washing here, and clean up after doing yard work or auto repair. Direct access to the garage is also handy for
